

It was indeed a 4-day Tanjay style “royal wedding of the (half) century/ies”. It had a pre-pre-nuptial, a pre-nuptial, the wedding day party, and finally, a post-nuptial gathering. Ceremony and reception were held at the magnificent Jericho Terrace with its reputation for fine cuisine, impeccable service and elegant ambiance. After the ceremony in the chapel, the guests (some shown at bottom photos and on the following pages) sat down for generous servings of hors d’oeuvres in an anteroom, prior to transferring to the main dining and dance hall where an bubbly energetic DJ led everyone to a frenzy of dancing, singing, and classic Tanjayanon fun.

And as if the revelry was not enough, when the event broke up at 5:00 pm, the Tanjayanons proceeded to the house of Dr Manny & Perla Labe-Pinzon for more fun that lasted late into the night. Still, that seemed not sufficiently quenching, for at noon the next day, they gathered at the plush residence of Engr. Nilo and Olive Torres for a post nuptial party with more fun, food, laughter and the classic “mga estoryang Tinanjay.”
